Petroleum PE Practice Exam 2016: Afternoon Section

Synopsis

This practice exam was written to help engineers prepare for the petroleum Professional Engineering (PE) Exam. It simulates the Afternoon Section, to be completed in 4 hours under exam conditions. If four unbroken hours are hard to schedule, ten problems in a hour is a fair approximation of the exam's pace. The primary source for these problems was the Petroleum Engineering Guidebook: Designed for the Professional Engineering Exam. Answers shown at the end of the exam reference this book on nearly every question. The Guidebook was the key text the author used to pass the petroleum PE Exam on the first attempt in 2015. There are limited ways an open-book exam can be written to produce the desired failure rate (39% for the 2015 PE exam). It can cover esoteric subjects. It can be time-limited. It can be vague and confusing. Anticipate all of these approaches on this sample exam. Presume them on the real exam as well. This is the highest quality practice petroleum PE exam available. If you can get 70% of the problems correct under actual test conditions you will have a high likelihood of passing the petroleum PE exam in 2016 (or beyond).
